

What are our plans for the building?

The OpenSpace Trust is concerned with preserving our common heritage and making it available to the public.

A significant stage has been achieved with the completion of the restoration stages and we now move forward to creating new spaces within the building. It is intended to tell the story of the building and its place in the development of Aberdeen, and also to host a range of different archives held by a number of organisations in a central location where they can be seen. There will also be other meeting spaces and a café.

Now is a good time to become involved in this exciting project.

What have we done?

The Mither Kirk Project started in 2004 with the OpenSpace Trust being formed in 2008 to take it forward.

The archaeological dig was reckoned to be one of the most significant in an ecclesiastical setting in Europe.

Following that, to make the building wind and watertight the external fabric of the building received attention with a new roof, stone repair and re-pointing, and stained glass replacement or restoration as needed. A crypt has been built for the human remains from the archaeology. We now have wheelchair access to St Mary's Chapel which has also been fully restored and is available to host events.
